Description

Data collection is often challenging for educators, especially when goals are targeted in included settings. The present workshop will focus on procedures for collecting useful data and discuss strategies for determining the best fit for data collection across different environments. Procedures for collecting and evaluating data will be conducted. Strategies for creating measurable IEP goals will also be discussed.

ROBERT H. LARUE, Ph.D., BCBA, is a Research Assistant Professor at the Graduate School of Applied and Professional Psychology at Rutgers University. He is the Assistant Director of training at the Douglass Developmental Disabilities Center. He earned a dual doctorate in biological and school psychology from Louisiana State University. He completed his predoctoral internship with the Kennedy Krieger Institute at Johns Hopkins University and a postdoctoral fellowship with the Marcus Institute at Emory University. He has co-authored published articles in peer-reviewed journals and presented at national and international conferences. His interests include the assessment and treatment of maladaptive behavior, staff and teacher training and behavioral pharmacology.
