ABOUT THE DDDC

The Douglass Developmental Disabilities Center (DDDC) is a part of the Applied and Academic Autism Services (Triple A) unit within the Graduate School of Applied and Professional Psychology (GSAPP) at Rutgers University-New Brunswick, The DDDC is a center that focuses on the application of applied behavior analysis (ABA) to the delivery of service to support individuals with autism spectrum disorders (ASD), their families, and the professionals who provide services to them.

As a university-based program, we have a rich training program for undergraduate, master's, and doctoral students in applied behavior analysis. Each year, we also provide training about ASD to undergraduate and graduate students from a variety of other disciplines to develop the next generation of professionals prepared to meet the needs of autistic individuals. We expand our reach further through the dissemination of research done at our center on how to best meet the needs of individuals impacted by autism and intellectual disabilities.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

By founding the DDDC in 1972, Sandra Harris shaped the service delivery system and the availability of service in New Jersey and nationwide to what it is today. While so much of the work of the DDDC is evident in the tangible, hands-on training and service that occurs within its walls, it lives beyond Rutgers' campus and is evident in the careers and fulfilling lives of its clients, families, staff, and partners. The experiences and lives of those whom the DDDC supports and serves have also inspired a vast body of research and scholarly works through generations of DDDC doctoral students and academic trainees. This book is a celebration of 50 years of research and scholarship originating with the pioneering work of Dr. Harris and sustained by those she has mentored at the DDDC.

Dr. Harris earned her doctorate in clinical psychology from the State University of NY - Buffalo in 1969. Dr. Harris was a professor and dean of the GSAPP at Rutgers, The State University of NJ. In 1972 Dr. Harris founded the DDDC at RU for children and adolescents with autism. Her research and clinical interests focus on people with autism and their families. She has written extensively in this area, including several books and dozens of journal articles, and book chapters. Dr. Harris has consulted nationally for schools and organizations that serve people with autism and has served as an expert witness in legal cases concerning the rights of people with developmental disabilities. She was an associate editor of the Journal of Autism and Developmental Disorders, a fellow in the APA divisions of Clinical Psychology and Child and Youth Services, and a fellow in the American Psychological Society.
